Self-titled debut release

“The Righteous Hillbillies have developed their own unique sound and are ready to start spreading it across the states.”

The Righteous Hillbillies have performed at the Chicago Street Pub on a number of occasions, and it has been a pleasure to have them every time. Their shows are energetic and highly entertaining . . . a definite favorite with our crowd here at the pub! They are professional, courteous, and, of course, incredibly talented. They come very highly recommended for any event, and to top it off, happen to be some of the nicest people that I know.

What we all love about the Righteous Hillbillies is their dedication to the fans. The band is made up of some of the best musicians collectively we have ever seen. From the moment they hit the stage...they're explosive. And how can you NOT be curious to see them with a name like “The Righteous Hillbillies?” They're the best guys to deal with when it comes down to planning an event. We have a huge Labor Day party every year, and this year The Righteous Hillbillies put us on the map. We love them and call them our friends.

The Righteous Hillbillies don't just give you a concert...it's an entire show. I guarantee you won't leave until they're done!

I've listened to a lot of alt. country stuff over the past from Commander Cody to Steve Earle. This stuff can be hard to find and is generally overlooked by stations that favor something else they call Country. Right off the bat you know you're listening to the real deal when Kev starts off with his grindy, crunchy, “no-oil-in-the-crankcase” style that gets everyone on their feet. His solos are bluesy and original with a healthy dose of Country twang and Texas blues. He's also got a great voice for this type of style but he's unfortunately out ranked by the great Brent James who helps take it to the next level with both his rhythm playing and growling, no-holds-barred singing similar to a Dan Baird or Jason RingenbergThe rhythm section always keeps it tight and their overall sound is genuine, roots, kick ass, roadhouse fun. Consummate showmen, you really have to see these guys live to appreciate the camaraderie they share and the friendly jabs that they take at each other and the audience. You won't be disappointed.

The goal of The Righteous Hillbillies has always been to set the stage on fire wherever and whenever they play. The passion for the music drives them. Music is their religion; the stage, their altar; the crowd, the noise, the energy, their dogma. Imagine Johnny Cash with an electric guitar and a stack of Tube Amps. The hillbillies are consummate professionals; they are comfortable on any and every stage—new, old, small, big. They leave everything they've got—blood, sweat, tears. Righteous, indeed.

We look forward to playing your club, festival, bike rally, backyard pig roast, concert hall, venue or theatre. Thanks for your consideration!
